SMOKE ALARMS SAVE LIVES

Smoke alarms are very important. They sound an alarm to alert you in time to escape. Smoke alarms wake you up at night or alert you during the day to a fire. Smoke alarms save lives!

Unfortunately, every year about 12,000 children are injured or die in fires at home. Most happen in homes without a working smoke alarm. Even though most homes have smoke alarms, about one out of every three alarms is not working or is missing good batteries.

To protect your family, you should:

- Have a smoke alarm near, or inside every bedroom and on every floor or level of your home.
- Test the alarms once a month
- Never take the batteries out of your alarm to use for something else.
- Put smoke alarms in a high place on the wall or on the ceiling.
- Have family members practice different ways to get out of the house during a fire.
- Never allow anyone to smoke inside your home.
- Keep matches and lighters out of reach from children.

1. When should you change the batteries in your smoke alarms?
2. How many children are injured or die in fires at home every year?
3. Where should smoke alarms be placed?
4. What should family members practice?
